Nostalgia for quieter times

Clean desk. First day of new semester.

I'm reading Epictetus.

My office mate and students pester
my focus on the treatise.

Through Red Sox banter I've been learning

it's hard to keep my poise—

I never took that course concerning the signal and the noise.

Those days I didn't think imprudent

to make a minor riot,

but then I was a graduate student:
my office was too quiet.

Whispers unraveled in Urbana

like one continued fraction:

that was the Pax Americana
I lost to this distraction.

Instead of "let n be a number,"

these voices rattle "Papi."

I may look stoic in my slumber
but I'm not very happy.

Perhaps there's wisdom on these pages

on how to tune out chatter.

I miss your silence as mine rages,
beloved Alma Mater.
