

The STEAM Journal

Volume 1
Issue 2 The Quantified Self

Article 11

February 2014

Influx

Julie Orr
Claremont Graduate University

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarship.claremont.edu/steam>

Part of the Art and Design Commons

Recommended Citation

Orr, Julie (2014) "Influx," The STEAM Journal: Vol. 1: Iss. 2, Article 11. DOI: 10.5642/steam.20140102.11
Available at: <https://scholarship.claremont.edu/steam/vol1/iss2/11>

© February 2014 by the author(s). This open access article is distributed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivatives License.

STEAM is a bi-annual journal published by the Claremont Colleges Library | ISSN 2327-2074 |
<http://scholarship.claremont.edu/steam>

Influx

Abstract

My work is both a commentary on the pervasive societal ills of disposability and detachment in contemporary culture and an active participant in the same environment it criticizes.

Keywords

Consumption, technology, consumerism, media, materialism

Creative Commons License

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial-No Derivative Works 3.0 License.

Orr: Influx

Influx
Julie Orr

Influx

Julie Orr

My work is both a commentary on the pervasive societal ills of disposability and detachment in contemporary culture and an active participant in the same environment it criticizes. I demonstrate my simultaneous revulsion and fascination with disposable goods. I photograph myself with such chemically toxic substances as cosmetics, sodas and cleaning products, speaking to their harmful nature while also reveling in their shimmering color. Their clever design is no accident and I find myself giving into the marketing seduction. The same goes for such other harmful behaviors as obsessive use of cell phones and social media, and rabid consumption of reality television and gossip magazines. In my work, I want to show we are the consumers and the consumed.

I embrace excess with piles of wires, trash, screaming colors and all sorts of environmentally unfriendly materials such as foil, resin and neon spray paint. It feels a bit over the top at times, screaming for attention like an ad in a swarm of commercialism. We have become hoarders and foragers, sifting through endless stuff: accumulated waste, material goods, and information. This proliferation of technology has enabled greater access to our global community, but leaves us feeling helpless without it. I try to assault the viewer with extraneous material, in the same way media has assaulted me.