Mime Journal

Volume 27 Present-time Nō plays: Ataka and Mochizuki

2-23-2021

Editor Note

Diego Pellecchia
Kyoto Sangyō University

Rebecca Teele Ogamo
International Noh Institute

Thomas Leabhart

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholarship.claremont.edu/mimejournal

Recommended Citation

Pellecchia, Diego; Teele Ogamo, Rebecca; and Leabhart, Thomas (2021) "Editor Note," Mime Journal: Vol. 27, Article 2. DOI: 10.5642/mimejournal.20212701.02
Available at: https://scholarship.claremont.edu/mimejournal/vol27/iss1/2

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Current Journals at Scholarship @ Claremont. It has been accepted for inclusion in Mime Journal by an authorized editor of Scholarship @ Claremont. For more information, please contact scholarship@cuc.claremont.edu.
Present-time Nō Plays

Ataka and Mochizuki

Editor
Diego Pellecchia
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The idea of this issue of Mime Journal dedicated to nō was suggested by Thomas Leabhart during a conversation that followed Udaka Tatsushige’s performance of Mochizuki in March 2015. Together with Rebecca Teele Ogamo, we discussed how nō, the traditional Japanese stage art well-known for its use of masks and abstract dance, also contains dramaturgical and performative elements that could be associated with theatre according to a generally shared Western sense. We felt the urge to pursue research on the theatricality of nō, expressed best by plays belonging to the aesthetics of genzai nō (“present-time nō”) through the exploration of two plays. Mochizuki was performed by Tatsushige for the first time in 2015, while Ataka was last performed by his father, Michishige, in 2014. This issue of Mime Journal collects the results of this research.

First, I would like to thank all the authors and performers for providing such wonderfully rich and diverse contributions. Monica Bethe and Katherine Saltzman-Li’s guidance and Rebecca Teele Ogamo’s assistance have been essential during the long road to the publication of this issue—thank you for your constant support and patience. It would not have been possible to complete our project without the meticulous work of associate editor YT Wong. I am also grateful to Udaka Tatsushige and Mikata Shizuka for providing the performance images that beautifully illustrate the essays in this paper, and to Columbia University Press for allowing us to republish Anthony Chambers’s translation of Ataka.

Diego Pellecchia, Editor
Kyoto Sangyō University
FOREWORD

Leaving Etienne Decroux’s Corporeal Mime school and returning to the United States in 1972, I noticed a lack of English language texts about Decroux and his mentors Jacques Copeau, Charles Dullin, and Louis Jouvet, as well as his students and collaborators like Jean-Louis Barrault. Also at that time little or nothing existed in print on what we now call “devised” or “actor-centered” theatre. In 1974, using the word “mime” in its largest sense, we published the first issue of Mime Journal; since then it has been called “an excellent publication” by the New York Times, “unique and imaginative” by the Library Journal and “fat...glossy and essential reading” by American Theatre.

At irregular intervals since 1974 Mime Journal has published 25 volumes:

- Essays on Mime
- Mask Theatre
- New Mime in Czechoslovakia
- Jean-Gaspard Deburau
- Traditional Czech Marionette Theatre
- Etienne Decroux 80th Birthday Issue
- Jacques Copeau’s Theatre School
- New Mime in North America
- New Mime in Europe
- Noh/Kyogen Masks and Performance
- Words on Mime by Etienne Decroux
- Canadian Post-Modern Performance
- In/Sights: Moore Photographs, 1972-1988
- California Performance / Volume 1
- California Performance / Volume 2
- Words on Decroux
- Incorporated Knowledge
- Theatre and Sport
- Words on Decroux 2
- Transmission
- An Etienne Decroux Album
- Theatre East and West Revisited
- Essays on François Delsarte
- The Dynamo-Rhythm of Etienne Decroux and his Successors
- Grotowski and His Legacy in Poland
- Action, Scene, and Voice: 21st-Century Dialogues with Edward Gordon Craig

With changing times and new technology, convenience of publication and the possibility of reaching a wider audience move us to adopt this on-line iteration of Mime Journal. You may order back issues from Amazon and from the Theatre Department of Pomona College in Claremont, California.

We encourage your questions, suggestions, and submissions.

Thomas Leabhart, Editor
tleabhart@pomona.edu
DEDICATION

We dedicate this issue of Mime Journal to two remarkable artists and teachers no longer with us: Professor Emeritus of Theatre and Dance at Pomona College Leonard Pronko and master actor of the Kongō school of Nō Udaka Michishige. Leonard with his deep understanding of kabuki, and Michishige with the challenges he continuously undertook in nō performance and mask carving, introduced generations of diverse students to these traditional Japanese arts.

These two giants in their fields enthusiastically shared the passion and excitement they lived through these arts. They refused to allow those of us, who felt ourselves outside perceived cultural barriers and restrictions, to be held in check. Following their example and urging, generations of students have themselves become revolutionaries, each individually influenced by these modest, rigorous, and generous masters.

Thirty-six years ago, in 1984, the Mime Journal issue Noh/Kyogen Masks and Performance sought to give voice to artists and practitioners, nō and kyōgen mask carvers and performers. This issue, in which both Leonard and Michishige were instrumental, introduced a broad spectrum of traditional artists as well as examples of cultural crossovers and experiments.

The present issue examines in depth two nō plays, Ataka and Mochizuki. As in the earlier issue, we hear voices of performers in interviews. Scholarly introductions provide background for the plays, their costumes, and for the genre of genzai nō ("present time nō"), to which both belong. We include a translation of Ataka and a previously unpublished translation of Mochizuki. We also discuss Kanjinchō, the kabuki play based on Ataka, including its relationship to nō.

We hope readers will find value and inspiration in all of these articles. Although Leonard and Michishige are not here with us to celebrate the completion of this issue, they are surely encouraging us not to rest here, but to continue on to the next challenge.

Rebecca Teele Ogamo and Thomas Leabhart
CONTENTS

Introducing Genzai Nō: Categorization and Conventions, with a Focus on Ataka and Mochizuki
Diego Pellecchia
1

Guise and Disguise: Nō Costumes in the Context of Cultural Norms
Monica Bethe
17

Mochizuki: History and Context
Michael Watson
37

From Ataka to Kanjinchō: Adaptation of Text and Performance in a Nineteenth-Century Nō-Derived Kabuki Play
Katherine Saltzman-Li
48

Paragons of Loyalty on the Japanese Stage
J. Thomas Rimer
67

On Ataka: Interview with UdaKA Michishige and SugI Ichikazu
Interviewed by Diego Pellecchia and Rebecca Teele Ogamo
77

On Mochizuki: Interview with Mikata Shizuka and UdaKA Tatsushige
Interviewed by Diego Pellecchia and Rebecca Teele Ogamo
82

Ataka
Translated by Anthony H. Chambers
87

Mochizuki
Translated by Rebecca Teele Ogamo
111