In the completeness
of the universe,
in the transcendental
and otherwise irrational bridges that span the Hippasusian canyons between understood
and not, I have faith;
because knowledge
is a real line, a dense progression of truths spaced by questions, infinitesimally small,
yet infinite in number and I believe they will yield someday to more truths, but until then I have faith in ignorance because it is enough just to know that there exists an answer.
